Part B. CV SUMMARY (max. 3500 characters, including spaces)

In my academic career I have followed two successive lines of research. In the first one I was strongly influenced by contemporary french thought, and it was focused on the study of Renaissance skepticism and the rise of modern subjectivity (with much emphasis on the Essais of Michel de Montaigne). In the course of this research, I was a visiting PhD student at the Universities of Paris IV-Sorbonne and Chicago, and I published two monographs, (2005a and 2007) and more than twenty papers in Spanish, French and English.

Even if I still work occasionally on that line of research, in recent years I have focussed on the second one of the aforementioned lines, approaching the same set of philosophical challenges with a systematic and analytical methodology, contributing to various ongoing debates in epistemology (epistemic luck and risk, virtue epistemology, knowledge-how), philosophy of language (pragmatics, speech acts theory) and action theory (intentional action, achievements). While working on those topics, I have held visiting positions at universities such as Berkeley (2005), Duke (2006), Oxford (Wolfson College, 2009/10), Edinburgh (2013, 2015, and 2016), NYU (2019) and Glasgow (2022). Results of this second line of research have been articles in journals such as Philosophy and Phenomenological Research (Q1), Synthese (Q1), Metaphilosophy (Q1), Pragmatics & Cognition (Q2), or Erkenntnis (Q1).

Linking these two lines of work has been a personal intellectual adventure, and as a result of it I produced what I consider my most relevant contribution so far: How to do philosophy with words: reflections on the Searle-Derrida debate. A revised version of this monograph, originally published in Spanish by Fondo de Cultura Económica (2010), was published in English by John Benjamins (2017).

Along these years, I have also carried on intense undergraduate and graduate teaching, I have been Vice-Dean on different occasions, and I have been editor in different journals and on line resources. Regarding funding, I have been a research member in 5 different national research projects and co-Principal Investigator in one of them (2019-2022).
